Specification

1. The disclosure is objected to because of the following informalities: As mentioned on page 3, the last line, "S<sub>4</sub>" is not labeled in Fig. 18. Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

3. Claims 1-16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Seki et al. (20040025585) (hereinafter Seki).

Seki teaches a flow sensor (100) comprising a sensor part having a corrosion resistant metal substrate (124), a temperature sensor (121A, 121B) and a heater (120) mounted on a surface of the substrate. Seki teaches all the inherent requirements of the base and body structure including the sensor element that is formed on the diaphragm that include an insulating film and a protective layer over the sensor elements (Fig. 1).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

4. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Art Unit: 2855

5. Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Nagata et al. (5,291,781) (hereinafter Nagata).

Nagata teaches a flow sensor comprising all the elements including a metal substrate (col. 4, lines 30-35).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

6. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

7. Claims 2-16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Nagata teaches all the features of the instant invention except for the structural arrangement based on the use of a metal substrate for a semiconductor substrate. It would have been within the scope of a skilled individual to modify the supporting structure based on the modification since such modifications would be inherent based on the use of a metal substrate. Nagata teaches the diaphragm formed of an insulating layer when the substrate is made of metal. In the instant the substrate is made of metal such as stainless steel, other structural modification would be necessary and thus would not have been an inventive feature. The modifications would be good for also the base member or the housing structure where an O-ring or any type of sealing means would be necessary. In the instant case to make the device corrosion resistant, one having ordinary skill in the art would use a non-corrosive material, such as stainless steel, as a sealing means.
